Directory of Higher Education Scholarship Programs for Boston Students

Preparing our students for the twenty-first century...and beyond

September 1995
Thomas M. Menino
Mayor of Boston

CITY OF BOSTON • MASSACHUSETTS

OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
THOMAS M. MENINO

September, 1995

Dear Student,

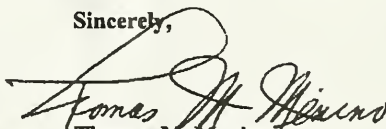

During my 1994 inaugural address, I made a pledge to the freshmen of all Boston public high schools. I promised these students that if they graduated from school with a 'B' average and were accepted by a local college or university, I would work in partnership with those in higher education and in private industry to ensure their ability to attend. I felt then, as I feel now, that access to college should not be a remote possibility, but an attainable goal.

Much work has already gone into facilitating this goal. Over the past year and a half, I have met with presidents of nearly thirty Boston area colleges and have asked for their support. Several of these institutions have increased their commitment to Boston public high school graduates. I want to thank these colleges and universities for their demonstrated investment in our city's youth — their continued efforts to provide professional development and training, student scholarships and outreach programs, and enhanced access to higher education through innovative programming.

Last March, we began to formally document scholarship programs available to Boston public school graduates. We prepared a preliminary booklet with the understanding that over the next few years resources would be augmented. An increase of college commitments is already reflected in this updated directory.

This directory brings us one step closer to the goal of helping promising students to gain access to college. It is an on-going process — one which I will continue to further. But much of the challenge and reward rests with you. As you prepare for your future, I offer my enthusiastic support, encouragement, and best wishes.

Sincerely,

Thomas M. Menino
Mayor of Boston

Mayor Thomas M. Menino would like to thank Sallie Mae for making this directory possible through its generous support.

Introduction

Every deserving student should have the opportunity to further his or her education. Meeting the costs can often be the greatest challenge. Supported by the Boston Higher Education Partnership, institutions have made commitments to providing access and support to students graduating from Boston high schools. We believe Boston's rich educational resources should be accessible to Boston's students.

This directory was developed especially to aid students and parents in the often difficult and time-consuming process of finding financial assistance. We have compiled a listing of local scholarship programs which are available to Boston high school graduates. We have included scholarships sponsored by higher education institutions, as well as several community-based and foundation scholarships.

The college-based scholarships are listed in alphabetical order by institution, followed by community scholarships by scholarship name. Brief statements are included on the eligibility requirements and criteria for selection. Students should pick out the scholarships for which they are eligible and which interest them. They should then contact each scholarship directly to request more detailed information and an application form. We advise students to start early and watch all deadlines.

The Directory of Higher Education Scholarship Programs for Boston Students was compiled by Jesse Southwick and Ron Ancrum, with help from Robert Walthall, and from Diane Dickerson and Cynthia Hairston, Higher Education Information Center and John Diggins, Boston Public Schools.

Other Sources

With this directory, we have tried to compile a listing of scholarship opportunities to benefit graduating Boston students. Included are only those scholarships that release information publicly or have responded to our requests. We encourage students to investigate other sources of financial aid, some of which follow.

College Financial Aid Offices: When searching for financial assistance, students should contact the financial aid office of the schools they are considering. All colleges have financial aid programs, usually including combinations of grants, loans, and work opportunities. Some Boston area schools award financial aid solely on the basis of need. All of the many local education institutions that make Boston such an education mecca welcome applicants from Boston's schools.

High Schools: Students should see their high school guidance counselor for help in locating other financial aid sources. Each year many national scholarships are awarded to Boston students. The Central Guidance Office has compiled a list of these scholarships in the "Boston Public Schools 1995-96 Scholarship Directory." Many of the Boston public high schools themselves offer scholarships for their graduates.

State and Federal Programs: The Commonwealth of Massachusetts offers a number of aid programs including the State Scholarship, the Gilbert Grant, and the No Interest Loan. The Federal Government offers Pell and Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants, Perkins and Stafford Loans, and College Work-Study. Students should file the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to be eligible for State and Federal programs.

Student Loans: Student loans are a widespread and useful tool in affording college. Loans can be obtained from government, institutional, financial, and private sources. For a free brochure about applying for student loans, write to Sallie Mae, Room T4152, 1050 Thomas Jefferson Street NW, Washington D.C. 20007.

Programs for Non-Traditional Students: Most of the scholarships listed in this directory are available only to graduating seniors entering full-time post-secondary education. Contact the institutions you are considering for information on programs available for transfer, part-time, or graduate students.

Higher Education Information Center: A division of The Education Resources Institute (TERI), the Higher Education Information Center provides free information and counseling about higher education admissions and financial assistance programs. The Center is located at the Copley Branch of the Boston Public Library, 666 Boylston St. The phone number is (617) 536-0200.
